Also discussed need for specialised units for children and young people with ASD, but do not have SLD, so they can have a learning environment that better meets their needs but will still stretch them academically. Building issues, such as more facilities at post-16 or the desire for all mainstream schools to have a resource unit. Specific school or additional resource units for non-ASD children and young people that are neither mainstream nor special school.	None of the current draft proposals include any capital support for mainstream schools. This will be considered in later phases. Feedback has been considered and the proposals above include new resources in primary and secondary, additional places at secondary and post-16 for a wide range of needs, including ASD. More consideration is being given to the feasibility of establishing better support for ASD without SLD.
